424,108 403,947 379,566 The New York Chronicle, of August ist, has the following: "The market he past week for cotton on the spot has been firm, with some improvement in the demand for consumption. Specula-tion has been the main source of strength; holders, in view of the rapid eduction which is now going on in stocks of American cotton, have been inclined to look for a recovery in prices, especially as the rains have continued in some of the Atlantic States; consequently, they have not been free sellers. he concentration of supplies at this tarket puts them under easy control. o-day, the market was quiet, and with he decline in gold, was scarcely so firm, the decilie in gold, was scarcely so from, For fourse delivery, the market, though subject to frequent fluctuations, has on the whole been tending upward, especially in the latter months. This is due entirely to speculation based on what are termed "the chances:" that is, 84; Hariford and Eric, 1011; Delaware that tuyers, even admitting that the situation is now against them, deciare that it is "too good to last," and that any misadventure to the and Lackswana, 1071 growing crop, or such a rewival of spec-ulative confidence as seems to be antici-pated, will operate in their favor, and quiet, 16jc. secure to them a profitable sdvance. In some respects our telegrams are decided-The favorable fact is the sation of the rains in Texas and also a very considerable extent throughout the Gulf States; the unsatisfactory featres are that along the Atlautic there are points where they are still having rict tributary to Memphis the drought s thought to be doing much harm. Our ralveston correspondent telegraphs that he is glad to announce a change of weather: there has been no rain all the week; rumors of the appearance of the caterpillars and of injury done by them are in a remarking, but he deems them of very little importance, unless there is a return of the rainy weather; if dry weather continues the crop will be large; considerable preparations are being made to attack worms should they ap-pear again; planters are much elated at the prospect. At New Orleans the weather has been warm and dry all the week. There has been no rain all the week at Memphis, but the days have been warm and the nights cold; our corndent says that he believes that damage is being done by the and rust is developing badly in many places; the reports, therefore, from both orn and cotton crops are less favorable * THE GENERAL MARKET WAS SO quiet as to be little more than a matter of form.
